A good show and pleased audiences were the rule last night at Dreamland.
The entertainment deserves large patronage, for it is one of the best of the week. Two first-class dramas, one of which is a Biography. One comedy of the desirable kind. The song is new and catchy.

Henry B. Harris' system of sending shows on the road are they outlive their usefulness in New York is quite an innovation and thus far this season is proving that this discerning manager has again struck a popular cord. "The Third Degree," instead of being retained in New York for three years, such as the business would justify, is now on the road and will play a series of one night stands, after which it will return to New York and complete the time originally laid out for it. "The Third Degree," Charles Keim's latest play, during its brief tour will be produced at the opera house on next Wednesday night, December 8.

A regular meeting of Clan Gordon,
No. 12, will be held Monday evening,
December 6, at 7 o'clock, when officers to serve the ensuing year will be elected. J. Elrick, secretary.

The Corn Crop Profitable.

The press of the state has recently given some attention to the discussion of the question of raising more corn in Vermont, generally contending that it will pay farmers to do so. The fact that corn can be made a profitable crop in Vermont has a practical illustration in the success of a farmer in Northfield, a report of which was published in these columns recently.

W. W. Holden, a leading farmer in Central Vermont, has long contended that farmers cannot afford to buy western corn and has maintained his position by making it a valuable crop each year on his own farm. This year, from six acres of yellow corn, he husked and put in the crib 600 bushels, worth $175, with $125 worth of ensilage, making $300, at a cost of $125 to raise and harvest the crop, leaving a profit of $175. With two exceptions, the past season was the poorest for corn in forty years.

Mr. Holden also raised for the corn canning factory in Northfield two acres of sweet corn, which cost him $50 to raise and harvest, and from which he obtained $70.40 for the corn, while the factory waste was drawn home with the same team that brought the corn, and the stover placed in the silo, was valued at a total of $70.60, thus making a net profit of $50 per acre from this crop. These latter figures show the value of a canning factory to the farmers of a town—and there ought to be so many of them scattered throughout the state that Vermont could supply the whole country with the best sweet corn.

These are practical figures and doubtless not a few other farmers in this section of the state can give returns that would make as good a showing. It is undoubtedly a fact that too many farmers depend on the West for their grain and feed, while, as Mr. Holden says, Vermont can beat any section of the country in raising corn.—Northfield

Waterbury Boasts.

The Fiske Jubilee Singers gave a sacred concert in Montpelier Sunday afternoon before an audience of 650. A collection was taken for the benefit of the school the colored singers represent and the magnificent sum of about $30 was realized. They appeared in Waterbury the night before and had nearly a 500 house. Note the difference.

The Mountaineer's Honor First and foremost, it's a Bio-graph. A story of the Kentucky hills about describes it. You've read about the terrible feuds of that country. There's an appealing love story in it. To see it is to want to see it all over again, it's so good.

A Mix-Up at Court
If one has ever been in a courtroom when there was a real mix-up, he will fully appreciate the significance of this picture. It's fine.

Village Soiree Small villages, as a rule, are inhabited by plenty of gossip and other things equally as desirable. See what there was in the village in this picture. Excellent.
